The Conning Tower

THE WATERING TROUGH NEIGHBOR hollowed out a tree, A simple trough he made; Beside the road beneath the hill He set it in the shade.

He led a shining runnel down, That rustic trough to fill. And there the wearied horses drank Beneath the shady hill.

There, too, the traveler cupped a hand To catch the runnel's flow. And in the cool a moment paused Before he turned to go.

Where ran the old dirt pike men laid A wide highroad one day; They felled the trees, they changed the stream. They took the trough away.

I like the broad, firm way they built, Yet also fancy still That shade-hung place where one might rest
